An Important Railroad Line.

An important step toward reviving the material prosperity of Virginia and West Virginia, whereby their great natural advantages of soil, climate, and mineral deposits will be made available for a greater and more active industry; has just been taken by several prominent New York capitalists in identifying themselves with the great railroad line which extends besome of my people had, seem, and of course An Important Railroad Line. the great railroad line which extends between Richmond and the Ohio River, now known as the Chesapeare and Omo RAILROAD. This line includes the old Virginia Central, and the Covington and Ohio roads, both of which received from the State prior to the war a large amount of aid-in the aggregate more than $5,300,000. This expenditure the State now surrenders to the new Corporation on very favorable terms. The road is in operation from Richmond to 'tie famous White Sulphur Springs of West Virginia, 227 miles, and it is believed can be completed to the Ohio (200 miles) by the close of 1871. Among the promoters of the enterprise are Messrs. C. P. Huntington of the Central Pacific Railroad, A. A. Low, as it is beautiful. And how did Johnson like it?" on very favorable terms. The road is in them to play with—and if you could have seen how much more contented and rest-William H. Aspinwall, David Stewart, and others of New York city; Messrs.

treated on the whole. The natives tried various interesting experiments upon them, such as scorching them, and scalping them, and all that sort of thing, and I killed one of them unyself, not in malice, but because I had a curious caprice to see how he would go with onions. He was a failure. Old and tough. Underdone, my vadina said—a shade too venerable I said. Give me numeroney and tenderness for a the great work will be carried through. The completion of this line to the Ohio Give me pungency and tenderness for a combination. Onlons and infance to dea of combination. A man, if he be anything of an epicure, is bound to like this dish. It is pur excellence, the national dish—no lean is complete without it. A lean is a grand feast, my friend—that is what the word means. Do you know that the edible dog of this land as a perfectly proper and elegant beast for human consumption? It is even so. He is never, never allowed to touch meat. He is fed wholly on poi—a strictly vegetable diet. He is great West. Beside being the shortest line from tide-water to Western cities, it will have the great advantage of grades much lighter than any of the more northerly lines. It passes through the great coal fields of the Kanawha, and will have cheap and abundant fuel. The celebrated iron ores of Virginia are situated on the poi—a strictly vegetable diet. He is reared in the house—steeps with his owners, male or female—rides horsecentral portion of the route, the active reared in the house—steeps with his sowners, male or female—rides horse-back with them, travels in the boat with them, is their inseparable pet and companion. They love him traderly in life, and in death they do not make your from him. They cat him. They stuff his body full of plantains, bananus, yams and other dainties, and cook him among hot some buried in a hole in the ground. Not a breath of the arona, not a drop of the ron furnaces of Southern Ohio at its westorn terminus; and between the two are those inexhaustible veins of "splint" coal, o necessary for iron manufacture. This line will furnish the necessary outlet for the fertile tract of country between the Cumberland and the Kanawha, and will draw over it the wheat of Minnesota, the cotton of Tennessee, Mississippi, and Arkansas, together with the cattle, wheat, and tobacco of the intermediate region, as it unites 16,000 miles of inland navigation and 20,000 miles of railroad in the West, to the best harbor on the Atlantic coast. by the shortest and most economical line be found. The coal and iron traffic of the road alone will be enormous.
